

CECS Progress Policy

The Progress Policy is designed to encourage successful completion of an Engineering, Computer Science, or Information Technology degree at UCF. The Progress Policy is enforced beginning with the 2015 catalog year.

The policy has 2 components: Low grades and withdrawals and multiple course attempts. Courses that fall under the CECS Progress Policy are all courses taken at UCF regardless of declared major or completed degree.

Low Grade and Withdrawal Component:

Students with (7) C-, D, F, W, NC, U grades at UCF will be placed in a probationary lack of progress status with the college. Students are encouraged to meet with a CECS advisor.

Students with (10) C-,D, F, W, NC,U grades at UCF are encouraged to meet with an academic advisor for career planning and selection of a major outside of CECS.

Repeat Course Component:

Student with two unsuccessful attempts of the same UCF course will be placed in a probationary lack of progress status with the college. Students are encouraged to meet with a CECS advisor.

Students with three unsuccessful attempts of the same UCF course are encouraged to meet with an academic advisor for career planning and selection of a major outside of CECS.

CECS students are responsible to know the policy and where they stand under the policy. Information regarding the policy is introduced at orientation, included in the UCF catalog, on the CECS website, and on the student's degree audit.

Students with questions regarding the policy are encouraged to meet with a CECS advisor in Engineering 107.
